JESSIE IN THE LANE.

The fields are clover-laden,
The bees are on the wing,
As Jessie, loveliest maiden,
Goes gayly sauntering
Adown the breezy lane.
The merry birds around her sing,
Nor warble they in vain,
For Jessie's heart is tuned to song,
As through the lane she moves along.

She loves the purple clover,
The drone of hurrying bees,
The songs that float above her,
The blossom-scented breeze
That ruffles her sunny hair;
For Jessie's maiden heart's at ease,
Untouched by love's sweet care,
And finds dear Mother Nature yields
A thousand joys in wood and fields.

And now among the grasses,
Along the verdurous way,
Sweet Jessie slowly passes,
And all the green array
Seems keenly, if perchance
A mystic four-leaved clover spray
Reward her eager glance.
In vain! not e'en her magic eyes
Can lure to view the fateful prize!

But see! one comes to greet her,
In sober homespun clad,
Why grows the prospect sweeter?
And why, with smile so glad,
Lights up her glowing face?
For he is but a rustic lad,
And she—a queen in grace!
Ah, that's a secret who can tell?
But Jessie likes her lad, e well.

Now side by side together
They saunter down the lane.
How lovely is the weather!
How fair the bloomy plain,
Swept by the summer air!
And Jessie, ere they turn again,
Knows why they seem so fair;
For, looking for a four-leaved clover,
Her maiden heart has found—a lover.

A Sensible School Drill.

It is a notorious fact that while Councils have taken decisive steps to compel the owners of all hotels, mills, factories
and other outbuildings in which men, women and children are obliged to remain during the day or night, to take precautions to prevent panics and fatal accidents in case of fire, the city has not the means to provide its own property with fire-escapes. Of the public school buildings which shelter over 100,000 children during the greater part of the day, very few of them have fire-escapes,
and many more are so constructed as to be little less than death-traps in case of fire and panic. In some of the schools, however, the Directors and teachers have taken the matter
into their own hands, and by a system of drills have accustomed the children to a system that will enable them to get out of the building in case of a fire without accompanying danger.
At the Newton Grammar School, Thirty-eight and Spruce streets, the system is now as near perfection as can be expected.

The Newton School building at present
accommodates about 650 children.
On the first floor is the boys' grammar school, the second is used by the girls, and on the third is a primary school of about 140 little children. The last-named arrangement had to be made by the Directors, owing to a want of room elsewhere, as it is not deemed wise to have the class-rooms for the little children so far from the street. About six months ago, Miss Louisa D. Elmes, Principal of the girl's school, began drilling the pupils under her charge in marching quickly from their places in the school-building to the yard. Mr.
James F. C. Sickel, Principal of the boys' school, and the Board of Directors, at once saw the importance of the experiment, and in a short time a thorough system was adopted. The necessary arrangements were made so that the teachers on the different floors could communicate with each other by means of speaking tubes, and by which a fire signal could be given from either the first, second or third floors. At first the pupils were obliged to go through the fire-drill two or three times a week,
but now they have become so thoroughly familiar with what is expected of them that the drill is less frequent,

once a week being all that is now necessary.

This morning a Bulletin representative visited the Newton School with two of the Directors for the purpose of seeing the fire-drill in practical operation.
It was about ten o'clock, all the scholars
being busily engaged at their desks, no warning having been given of the proposed drill. The first "alarm" was sounded from the first floor. Mr.
Sickel went to a speaking-tube near his desk, and blew into it sharply three times, thus giving the signal to both the floors above. At the same time he repeated the signal on the large gong. In an instant every scholar in the entire building was in motion, the teachers had posted themselves on the stairways, and the regular lines of children were passing out the doors and from the building. When the yard was reached the pupils remained in line just as they had left their places, until the signal to return was given. Of course the primary children were the last to get out, but the whole number—650 children—were out of all possible danger within a minute and three-quarters by actual time.
There was not the slightest confusion,
there was no crowding or pushing; and the three stairways could easily have accommodated another line of children at the same time. None of the pupils, except those in Mr. Sickel's class, who saw the signal given, knew whether they were simply drilling or whether there really was cause for the sudden dismissal. At the ringing of a bell
the pupils returned quietly and in order, and inside of four minutes from the time the fire signal was first given were at their desks.

The visitors then went to the girls'
school on the second floor and the drill was repeated, Miss Elmes giving the alarm. In an instant each pupil, from the little girls in the lowest grade to the young ladies in the senior class, was on her feet. The one nearest the door started at once in that direction, followed by the rest in the regular order in which they had been seated. This trial was quite as satisfactory as the first. In case of a real alarm of fire the pupils would naturally take their accustomed places in the drill, knowing by experience how quickly they are able to escape in that way. They seem to enjoy the exercise very much, and the teachers stated that it is beneficial in more ways than one. "When I find my girls becoming languid and dull," said Miss Elmes to-day, "I find there is nothing which freshens them up so much as this fire-drill, so that we are glad to train them in it." Both drills this morning did not occupy more than ten minutes altogether at the most.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

—"Am I hurting you badly?" asked horrible groans. "Oh, not in the least,

but I love to groan," was the reply.—

The election in Ohio takes place to-morrow.

Small pox has entirely disappeared from Lexington and the city is now said to be in the best sanitary condition.

A STRIKE among the iron men was inaugurated at Cincinnati on Friday. Seven hundred men have stopped work and it is expected that others will follow.

LEXINGTON Transcript: Col. J. Smith Hurt, Democrat nominee for congress in the ninth district, was a gallant soldier in the Union army, and since the war has been very liberal both in his votes and his political opinions. Notwithstanding, all this the Republican papers of the district call him a "Bourbon." Which goes to show that they will call any man a Bourbon who does not go bodily into the Republican ranks.

A DESPATCH from Washington to the Cincinnati Enquirer says: The prospects of the Republican campaign are so very discouraging that as a last resort, it has been concluded by the leaders here to exhibit once more the bloody shirt and wave it frantically, in the hope that the Northern masses in their excitement may yield their objections to bossism, machine politics and forgery, South Carolina, where the Republicans are supporting Greenbackers and murderers against the so-called Bourbons, has been selected for this business. The Republican candidate for Governor has come on to Washington and been interviewed, and last night arrangements were made to have his raw-head and bloody-bones stories extensively telegraphed to the Northern States. This card will be played now for all that it is worth till the elections are over, although it is calculated to cripple the grand Arthur movement to buy up the South by means of Federal patronage.

Good English isn't Expected.

New York Sun: Judge Folger writes bad English. He says, "In his connection." Grover Cleveland writes bad English. He says "In our midst." Good English is preferable.

"Mashers' Row."

An English actress and singer, put down in the bills as "Miss," is a married woman. She is now performing in Philadelphia. "I can not tell you," she said to a reporter, "how glad I am to find that there is no 'mashers' row' in American theaters. It is a great annoyance to an actress in London to have two or three rows of the front seats filled with fops in evening dress, who stare rudely at her all the time with opera-glasses and pester her with notes containing invitations to supper. A gentleman sent me round a white camelia, with a request that I would wear it the next evening. He would be in the front row of the stalls, wearing a similar white flower, to enable me to recognize him, and asked me to sup with him after the performance. I told my husband, and he went to the club and brought fifteen men, who all, purchased seats in the front row, and wore white camelias in their button-holes. My admirer appeared, and I wore the flower. He got into a dreadful state when he found the rest of the men wearing similar flowers, and, tried, by gestures, to draw my particular attention. I took no notice of him, however; nevertheless, he came to the stage door after the performance. My husband received him and gave him a threshing."

The Nude in Art.

Only a couple of seasons ago when Alma Tadema exhibited a nude figure at the academy, called the "Sculptor's Model" (writes a London correspondent), there was a terrific outcry about it, and one day a party of prudish ladies put up their parasols as they passed, for at the modern picture galleries in London the public are sensibly allowed to retain their umbrellas and parasols. But the public mind can be educated up to almost anything, and the day has come when the British matron has put aside the squeamishness which Thackeray ridiculed, and now critically discusses the nude in painting and sculpture. Sir Frederick Leighton's "Phryne in Eleusis" is provided with only a floating scarf of cherry gauze, some three inches wide, and even that the beautiful creature is laying aside as rapidly as the nature of her condition admits. You see her women discussing among themselves the length of her limbs, the true proportion of her waist and bust, and quite unconcernedly seating themselves in front of the picture to study it long and well. Another picture, called "The Golden Age," shows a big, quiet nude girl, wiping her back with a Turkish towel by the side of a little brook. A slight shiver seems to be passing over the bather, who digs her toes downward into the towel on which she stands, and I hear a pretty young woman telling a gentleman—what relationship, if any, there was between the two I know not—that "Ella" always shivered like that when she bathed. The most conspicuous nude picture at the Grosvenor is Burne Jones' Tree of forgiveness Phyllis is popping out at the almond tree at the passing and astonished Demphoon. both parties are devoid of the slightest vestige of clothing. Yet nobody seems to see anything amiss in the contemplation of this painting. Burne Jones' other picture, "the mill," also has a curious feature. Three very beautiful and properly draped maidens are dancing on a lawn in front of a mill, and in the mill-pond a lot of men are bathing. The girls do not seem as if they intended to take any steps to prevent these public ablutions by applying to the authorities to suppress them as a nuisance but are dancing away as unconcerned as if nude men were a natural component part of every rural landscape. Perhaps they were in the old mediæval, monkish days depicted in "The mill."

THE following is from the Vicksburg Daily Commercial:

Mr. A. T. Cox, of the firm of Cox & Poynter, of Maysville, Ky., is in the city, with the brother of E. H. Poynter, his late partner; they are making every effort to recover the body of Mr. E. H. Poynter, who was lost on the Lee.

THE Vicksburg Daily Herald says: H. C. Poynter, of Midway, Ky., brother of E. H. Poynter; A. T. Cox, of the firm of Cox & Poynter, of Maysville, Ky.; B. A. Allen, brother of Miss Allen, of Hernando, Miss., and Mr. D. Seales, whose baby was lost, chartered the Daisy yesterday, and left for the wreck of the Lee with the hope of being able to recover the bodies of the missing ones. They expect to return by daylight this morning.

A DESPATCH from Vicksburg to the Cincinnati Commercial announcing the finding of the bodies of a number of victims of the Lee disaster says:

The body of Mr. Westermaker was identified by a very large plain gold ring which he wore on the little finger of his right hand, upon the inside of which was inscribed these words: "Be good, God bless you."

We are informed that Mr. E. H. Poynter wore a ring with a similar inscription. It is therefore possible that a mistake may have been made in indentifying the body, and it may prove to be that of Mr. E. H. Poynter.

The following telegram was received by Mr. A. T. Cox this morning:

VICKSBURG, Miss., Oct. 8, 1882.
A body found at Hart's Landing, and badly burned, is supposed to be that of Mr. E. H. Poynter.

New Orleans Minstrels.

The famous original New Orleans Minstrels will appear at the Opera House this evening in one of their choicest programmes. It is one of the strongest companies traveling this season, and the band which accompanies it is said to be second to none in the country. The entertainment is one that can be attended by ladies, as there is nothing that can in any way offend the most delicate taste. Tickets should be secured immediately at Taylor's news depot.

DR. J. D. DOUGHERTY, of Helena, has just presented to his wife, a beautiful grand upright piano, the celebrated Weber make. It was bought of our enterprising dealer, Mr. Metzger, and is the second one Mr. M. has sold within a week.

"JAY EYE SEE" a four year old colt belonging to Mr. Case, of Lexington, on Friday, trotted a mile in 2:18.

FRANK JAMES.

The Hero of the Hour, to the Sympathetic and Impressionable Missourians.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., October 7.—At Independence to-day the crowd of curious ones was even greater than yesterday. A number of old friends were admitted to the jail to talk with James. He seemed in excellent spirits, and expressed entire confidence in his ability to clear himself against the charges that may be brought against him. His wife visited him during the morning.

At the hotel yesterday he wrote upon the register, "Frank James, wife and child," remarking it was the first time he had signed his real name in sixteen years. There was a number of bidders for the autograph, but the landlord declined to permit the register to be cut.

James' appearance strongly indicates the rapid approach of consumption. Although he asserts he is in good health, it is evident that he has considerably broken physically, if not in spirit. It is the general opinion that he confidently expected to be admitted to bail yesterday, and there is no doubt that he would give bond in any amount that might be demanded.

The regular term of the Criminal Court occurs in November, but it is thought Judge White will give a hearing to the application for bail before that time. There is great difference of opinion here as to the probability of sufficient evidence being obtained to convict him of the charges preferred in this county. Opinions also are greatly at variance as to the chances for pardon in case of conviction.

Major Edwards states positively that James had no encouragement further than that offered in the letter from Governor Crittenden, published yesterday. The prisoner will be held at Independence until further action is taken.

St. Louis, Mo., October 7.—Governor Crittenden has withdrawn and abrogated the proclamation issued by him on the 25th of July last, in which he offered rewards for the arrest and conviction of certain train-robbers, he stating that the chief actors in said robberies are now either dead or in the custody of the laws of the state.

Mr. Henry Green has returned from his Southern trip, and will take charge of his train again on Thursday morning.

Mr. Will Blaine, formerly of the Maysville Republican, has accepted a good position in the office of the Cincinnati Trade list.

The BULLETIN is indebted to Miss Katie Thomas, one of the brightest little misses in the city, for a pleasant call this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Myall and daughter, who have been visiting the Eastern cities and Canada, have returned home. They are enjoying excellent health and were much pleased with the trip.

Calcutta Semi-via Leti.

Mr. William Chambers, of New Orleans, arrived in Maysville some weeks ago on a visit to his sister, Mrs. Dr. John Shackelford, and other relatives and friends in the city of his nativity. He was apparently in his usual state of health, but a few days ago was stricken with paralysis, and though loving friends attended his couch, and the best medical skill was administered for his relief, yet he continued to sink under the terrible stroke, and on last Wednesday morning yielded to the inexorable summons which awaits all the living, and mother earth opened her bosom for his long repose in the beautiful cemetery grounds near Maysville. Appropriate services were performed at the residence of Dr. Shackelford, by Rev. S. B. Alderson, of the Presbyterian Church, who conducted the ceremony at the grave which was beautifully decorated by loving friends. Three sisters still live to cherish his memory: Mrs. Mary Phillips, of Louisville, the venerable widow of the Hon. William B. Phillips, one of the early and highly respected Mayors of this city; Mrs. Margaret Stout, of South Carolina, a widow now 81 years of age, and Mrs. Ann Shackelford, the worthy wife of Dr. John Shackelford, of Maysville.

The deceased was the youngest son of James Chambers, who in 1798 emigrated from New Jersey with his wife Ann Armstrong and his infant daughter, Mary, to Washington, Ky., which was at that time an important place of trade, where the Kentucky Palladium, one of the earliest papers in the state was then published. James Chambers afterwards served for many years in the Legislature of Kentucky, and a part of that time as a state senator, but deceased in 1825. He was a brother of the Hon. John Chambers, who was appointed by President Harrison Governor of Iowa, and whose memory is still cherished for military and civil services. Wm. Chambers early in life left his home in Kentucky for New Orleans and engaged in commission business, and by his native excellence, close attention and strict integrity soon gained the confidence of the public and a competent success in business, which enabled him to gratify his generous disposition by awarding frequent and liberal largesses to his worthy neices and neices-in-law. His life was one of undeviating rectitude; though firm in his resolutions, yet so mild and courteous in his manners as to be highly appreciated by all who knew him, and by none more esteemed than by his life-long associates. For fifty years he was the same unchanging friend—in the class of 1832 with fifteen young men endeavoring to explore the arena of human science, he was the same quiet, attentive and thoughtful member as in the active scenes of his later business life.

"In life's last stage, O blessing rarely found,
Pleasant as youth with all its blossoms crowned,
Through every period of this changeful state,
Unchanged himself—wise, good, affectionate—
Farewell! ended with all that could enrage
Fond hearts to love thee, both in youth and age;
Although thy worth be more than half supposed,
Love shall be satisfied, and veil the rest."

What We Have Noticed.

That people who wear the best clothing do not always wear the best.

That people who boast that they always speak what they think, have some mighty mean thoughts.

That the man who persistently neglects to live within his income will one day be trying to live without it.

That the world is divided into two classes—those who are ambitious to ascend above mediocrity, and those who are ambitious that everybody else shall descend below their own mediocrity.

That the man who barter health for riches is never satisfied with his bargain.

That the man who has a large principal in the bank sometimes shows no principle in anything else.

That honesty is the best policy—in fact, that all rare things are reckoned the best.

That learning is a powerful auxiliary to the fool bent on displaying his folly.

That man and wife should not be yoked like oxen, but harnessed tandem. To get along smoothly, one must lead and the other follow.

That the strongest horse is generally placed between the shafts.

That the strongest argument against sexual equality is, that woman may be as bad as man when she is possessed of his superior opportunities.

That the married man wonders why the bachelor does not marry, and the bachelor wonders why the married man married—in fact, that this is a world of wonders.

That the girl who declares that she would not marry the best man alive quite frequently proves her sincerity by marrying the worst man she can find.

That it is the same with thought as with money—the less one has of either, the more eager he is to make a display of it.

That when a man is loved for himself alone, it is himself who is the lover.

That while some men pick their company, others pluck their company.

That when a man tells you of a chance to make money, he neglects to mention the hundred or more chances to lose it in the same enterprise.

That when a man says, in a slighting manner, that anybody can do this or that thing, he means that anybody but himself can do it.

That the photographer who can make a flattering picture is more successful than he who makes a correct likeness.

That he who sees no good in human nature is too much given to self-contemplation.

That the most precious goods are done up in the smallest bundles. The letter I is the smallest in the alphabet.

That people who pride themselves upon their ancestry do what they can to make their descendants humble when thinking of them.

That the man who could do a thing if he only tried is always very careful not to try.

That the man who is always able to say the right thing in the right place is usually found in the right place to say it.

That it is better to be good and homely than pretty bad.

That good taste is too often confined to the palate.

That no matter how ugly a nose may be, its imperfections are overlooked by its owner.

That the average man objects to paying the debt of nature, not so much because he is afraid to die as because he dislikes debt-paying.—Boston Transcript.

—Potato Salad: One quart of hot boiled potatoes cut into slices, a small onion, and an apple finely chopped, pepper and salt to taste, one tablespoonful of vinegar, three tablespoonfuls of olive oil; some chopped parsley. Kendall's Spavin Cure.

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain it effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

From Rev. P. N. GRANGER.

Presiding Elder of the St. Albans District. ST. ALBANS, VT., Jan., 20, 1880. DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—In reply to your letter I will say that my experience with 'Kendall's Spavin Cure' has been very satisfactory indeed. Three or four years ago I procured a bottle of your agent, and with it, cured a horse of lameness caused by a spavin. Last season my horse became very lame and I turned him out for a few weeks when he became better, but when I put him on the road he grew worse, when I discovered that a ring-bone was forming, I procured a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and with less than a bottle cured him so that he is not lame, neither can the hunch be found. Respectfully yours, P. N. GRANGER.

Perseverance Will Tell.

STROUGHTON, MASS., March 16, 1880. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—In justice to you and myself, I think I ought to let you know that I have removed two bone spavins with 'Kendall's Spavin Cure,' one very large one, don't know how long the spavin had been there. I have owned the horse eight months. It took me four months to take the large one off and two for the small one. I have used ten bottles. The horse is entirely well, not at all stiff, and no hunch to be seen or felt. This is a wonderful medicine. It is a new thing here, but if it does for all what it has done for me it will be very great.

Respectfully yours, CHAS. E. PARKER.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE is sure in its effects, mild in its action as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach a every deep seated pain or to remove any bony growth or other enlargement, such as spavins, splints, curbs, callous, sprains, swellings, any lameness and all enlargements of the joints or limbs, or rheumatism in man and for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for Illustrated Circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1. per bottle, or six bottles for $5. ALL DRUGGISTS have it or can get it for you or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors, DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO. Enosburgh Falls, Vermont.
